Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

"Dear Alben" wins in Kentucky. The re-election of the President's favorite and handiest rubberstamp, seems to be confirmed. We do not think his election is a credit to the New Deal, however, since the WPA had been stepped up in numbers and remuneration to make the victory possible. On the other hand the election of Chandler and defeat of Barkley would have borne witness to a degradation of the electorate of Kentucky as loathsome is that of Barkley's trimupt. It was state machine versus Federal machine and no holds barred. The President need not be too proud of his victory.

In California, President Roosevelt gave our elderly and New Deal doting Senator McAdoo a careless nod. We suspect that for some reason veiled from the common, plebian eye, the President is not as fond of his California yesman as he should be. Whether his endorsement of the senator will assist him in winning the nomination is doubtful. His recommendation lacks that fulsome, heart-appealing and eulogistic quality that distinguishes the Executive's utterances in commending men or measures near his heart.

Of course there is always this angle to consider by the Party Chieftain: There are five candidates in the race for the Democratic nomination for United States senator. Such a warmed-over endorsement as the President gave McAdoo is not sufficient to stir any of the other candidates to hot anger. Some might even regard it as damning the man with faint praise. If one of the other candidates succeed in gaining the nomination and winning at the polls in November, the President will not have to face another hostile member of his own party in the senate. In fact it seems well assured that the reason the President has failed, notably in Wyoming, officially to support his program backers, is due to fear of widening a breach that is already uncomfortably wide among Democratic leaders.

When Reid Robinson, national president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in a burst of perfervid oratory in Grass Valley, assured his eager listeners that when the workers of this country were thoroughly organized there would not be a man receiving less than $5,000, he started a train of thought in a large number of minds that is fraught with disaster.

For instance, he undoubtedly inspired one man with the noble purpose of reaching that goal as quickly as possible. The father of a large family envisioned a very different life than he was leading. He did his bit for President Roosevelt, whose name was used as a shibboleth in the picket line battle. After he had done his bit he was told by attorneys for the defense not to worry, the International Labor Defense would look after him and his family. Despite the "looking after", he is now in jail and his wife and children are in need of food. The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and their officials who led this man to think that in a little while, by throwing rocks and exerting himself along the lines laid down in communistic activities in the east, he would come into a happier era with $5,000 income, are now petitioning the Board of Supervisors for relief.

This poor deluded wight was not sold the Ferry building in San Francisco. He was sold a $5,000 income, and the sellers were the CIO and their orators. His plight is due to having been betrayed and misled by the CIO. It follows that the support of his wife and children is the moral if not the legal responsibility of the cheats who sold him the $5,000 a year income. Legally, however, they may avoid their responsibility by shouldering the job off on the tax payers.

It seems probable that the tax payers will have to foot the bill. We can not see a family suffer in our midst for lack of food. If the man had not been led astray by the CIO evangelists and cheats, he might have buckled down to work and supported his family. But the chances now are that he and his family, for the most part, will be a public charge for years to come.

This unfortunate loafer is here used merely as type of all those who chase rainbows, who believe what any lying knave tells them, who look upon government as something apart from the people and believe that they are entitled to eat, whether they work or not. The burden upon the tax payers, however, should be limited. Men who do nothing but eat and procreate ought to be sterilized.

HUSBAND SAVES WIFE FROM FIRE IN NICK OF TIME

A fire of undetermined origin burned the interior of the Fred Stritzky home Sunday morning between 12:30 and one o'clock. Mrs. Stritzky was asleep in the house and her husband barely rescued her in time to save her life, by dragging her through the window. She was scorched and received cuts which were treated by a doctor. Two small dogs in the bedroom were smothered, trapped and burned.

The house was a neat, new four-room building built by Mr. and Mrs. Stritzky on a lot purchased from Walter Daniels nearby and was just south of the Malcolm Auto Court on the Tahoe Ukiah highway.

The Nevada City fire department was called and rushed to the fire and kept the flames from spreading.

NEVADA CITY FIREMEN HONOR BEV. C. BARRON

Beverly C Barron was honored with a reception by Nevada City Firemen Saturday evening when he resigned from the position of foreman of Pennsylvania Engine Company, preparatory to leaving for his new position in the Sonora high school. He also held the position of secretary of fire delegates. Chief of Police Garfield Robson made the presentation to him of a pen and pencil with an appropriate little speech.

BOND ISSUE FOR SCHOOL CARRIES

The Nevada City high school bond issue carried by 18 votes last Saturday. There were 260 votes cast in favor of the bond issue and 103 against it making a total of 363 votes. The issue required 242 votes of this number to carry. The registered vote of this school district entitled to vote was about 2,000, less than 20 per cent of the voters going to the polls.

The next step will be to sell the bonds to obtain the money to complete the planned improvements which consists of construction of a stage in the new gymnasium with shops underneath. With these improvements completed the local high school will be one of the most modern and complete in this section of the state.

HOME FROM TRAINING CAMP

Carlos Casmore and Byron King, returned home Saturday evening from attending Citizens Military Training camp at Presidio at Monterey. The boys spent a month at the camp and young Casmore is delighted with his trip and the training he received. This is his first year and he was in a basic course, next year he plans to enter the Red course. The fourth and last year is blue. Casmore came home with his medal and a high recommendation.

CLACK SECURES BAIL AND IS RELEASED

George Clack, mining man of Nevada state, was released from jail Friday on bonds furnished by a bonding company after considerable delay. He has been in the Nevada county jail for a considerable period in default of $1500 bail.

Clack was held to answer in superior court recently on a felony warrant charging failure to pay Coley E. Boreham of Nevada City, employed by him at the Giant King mine south of Washington. The claim was for more than $500, and was paid and the charge dismissed. There are other misdemeanor charges against him in Judge W. L. Mobley's court. Bonds for his appearance on these charges was fixed at $1500. His case has been set for September 6.

TWO KILLED ON MAE WEST ROAD

Mrs. Frances Books 35, proprietor of the Ponta Hotel at Downieville and Joseph Maddison, 34, Ruby mine worker, were killed Saturday evening when Maddison's motor cycle plunged 150 feet down the canyon seven miles from Downieville on the Yuba Pass highway, Maddison took Mrs. Brooks for a ride on his machine last Saturday and when they did not return "Rocky" Brooks, her husband did not become seriously alarmed until Sunday forenoon. A search was then started. The bodies were discovered at 8 o'clock by a 12 years old boy fishing in the North Fork of the Yuba river.

Mrs. Brooks was the mother of three children the youngest being one year old.

MERRIAM HITS CIO COMMUNISTS AND RACKETEERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—Governor Merriam's open denunciation of "labor racketeering" and communistic leadership within the CIO for their part in scuttling the Pacific Coast ports has stirred this community to its depths.

While the business community generally hails the governor's method of frankly dealing with what is considered by most politicians as a "ticklish situation" there likewise has been a surprising response from laboring men as well. This is true not only of A F of L men but CIO members, opposed to the communist tactics of their leaders, have privately expressed their approval of the governor's position.

Governor Merriam's remarks were given at a luncheon of civic leaders ushering in San Francisco's Harbor Day celebration. In his address the speaker pointed to the millions of dollars that had been lost in wages and to business, the withdrawal of $70,000,000 in passenger tonnage, all of which, he pointed out, were attributable, at least in part, to labor racketeering.

At the same time, the governor expressed his sympathy with the thousands of honest workers, who had been forced into idleness through no fault of their own. He also pointed out that he had always been an active supporter of the principle of collective bargaining and other constructive measures beneficial to labor and not aimed at the destruction of American institutions.

SAN FRANCISCO MINT TO CLOSE SATURDAYS

Notice has been received that beginning September 1, the San Francisco Mint will be closed all day on Saturdays.

GOOD FISHING

A party composed of Myers Mobley, Miss Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hoge enjoyed a successful fishing trip on the Middle Yuba river Saturday. All caught fine limits of one pound trout. When asked about bait "Doc" Mobley stated "sliced cucumbers for bait."

Ernest L. Baxter, on the local staff of the Tahoe National Forest is making a field inspection trip in the North Bloomfield area this week. He will inspect crews, equipment and personnel.

TO VOTE, OR NOT TO VOTE, ISSUE AT LAVA CAP

The issue of voting or not voting on the bargaining group at the Lava Cap mine is now joined. Superintendent Chandler last week declared that until a vote was held, following the presentation of a petition to Madame Alice Rosseter, regional Labor Board director, in San Francisco there was no contract in effect and no bargaining agency.

Otto Schiffner, general manager of the Lava Cap, returning from a trip with his family to Alaska last Friday, immediately motored down to San Francisco for a conference with Madame Rosseter. This morning he declined to divulge the result of his conversation with the director, but did state that there would be a vote at the mine even if he had to go to Washington to get it.

Last week in a rambling letter in which he advised the Lava Cap management "not to run afoul of the Federal laws", R. J. Harris, financial secretary of the local CIO affiliate, declared that the contract which was supposed to have expired on August 1, was still in effect. He advised Chandler "to rest easy" so far as a majority is concerned. He claimed his records in the local CIO office show a considerable majority now working at the Lava Cap.

Sometime since Madame Rosseter refused to sanction a vote to determine the bargaining group because she said the local CIO oganization would not consent to a vote.

VETERAN TELEGRAPHER SUMMONED BY DEATH

E. M. Lewis, 70 years of age, veteran telegrapher for the Western Union organization and previously a newspaperman, died in Nevada City at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, in his first year or retirement. He came from Atlas, Ohio, and had lived in the Glenbook section with his family about 13 years on a ranch he purchased from the Tamblyn interests. E. M. Lewis was employed for a number of years as manager of the Western Union at Nevada City. More recently he was assigned to the traffic department of the company in Reno. He retired after 40 years of service.

Left to mourn his passing are a son, Jack W. Lewis, Grass Valley, a daughter Mrs. Helen L. Droesbeck, Fargo, North Dakota. Holmes Funeral Home will have charge of funeral arrangements.

BOTH TOWNS TO TURN OUT FOR M. M. P. L. PICNIC

The Mine Workers Protective League have planned a full day of sports and games of all kinds, swimming, dancing, and racing for their annual picnic to be held at Lake Olympia, Thursday, August 17.

The picnic which is the annual benefit for the widows and orphans of the independent labor organization, will this year attract the largest crowd in many years as every organization and club in the twin cities and entries district is solidly behind the big event.

It is understood Nevada City and Grass Valley business houses will close from 12 o'clock on to permit business people, their staffs and family members to attend.

The league has secured Don Baxters ten piece orchestra to play for dancing which will start at nine o'clock in the evening.

LIQUOR DEALERS PICNIC

The Wholesalers and Retailers Liquor Association held a picnic and party at the Junction of the Washington and Tahoe-Ukiah highways Sunday. Liquor salesmen, families and friends of Nevada City, Grass Valley, Alleghany and many other nearby cities enjoyed a pleasant day.

L. E. Noyes of Noyes Electrical company joined a group of Grass Valley fishermen and went to Donner Lake Sunday. The lake was rough from wind but the party had a most delightful time even though fishing was not so good.

CIO Prisoners Are Stuffed While Vasion's Children Go Hungry

A delegation of CIO members and officials called at the sheriff's office this afternoon on behalf of Mrs. Vassion and her seven children In the delegation were "Cudly" Jilbert, Mrs. Mark Cook, R. J. Harris, financial secretary of the local CIO organization and others.

Mrs. Mark Cook stated that she had heard the sheriff was opposed to the county's supporting Mrs. Vasion and her seven children. The sheriff stated that not only was he not opposed to county aid for the woman, but that he believed the county should help the woman, and had sent the family $5 out of his own pocket.

"What I did say," declared Sheriff Tobiassen, "was that the food that is being brought to the five CIO prisoners here all the time, would serve a lot better purpose if it were sent to Mrs. Vasion. The five men here in jail get just as good food as I do and as much of it. They are not suffering for food, and they are as well fed as anybody in the county. But if I hear any more insults about the kind of food they are getting I will stop all this extra special food right here at the counter."

Mrs. Cook exhibited a petition addressed to the Board of Supervisors asking for county aid for the Vasion family. There were perhaps 160 signatures to the petition.

Regarding the quantities of food which is being brought to the CIO prisoners constantly, she said that the local organization had no control over it, since it came from a "prisoner's relief fund" and from other sources. She stated that Mrs. Vasion was now in bed under care of a physician.

The sheriff intimated that if Vasion had not been misled by the CIO, had not abandoned a job to go on a strike, and had not been persuaded to take part in a riot, he might have been induced to work and to give his family some measure of support. However, for approximately seven years before coming to Nevada City the sheriff said, the Vasions were a public charge on the town of Lincoln.

"RED WATER" IN SEA CAUSED BY TINY ORGANISM

LA JOLLA, Aug. 8.—The appearance of a number of areas of "red water" in the ocean off widely separated points on the western coast within the past several months has occasioned a special study of the phenomenon by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of the University of California. The study is outlined in a recent issue of the magazine Science, in an article by W. E. Allen, assistant professor of biology in the institution.

While the coloration is known to be caused by the presence of vast masses of marine microscopic organisms, there is still much to be learned regarding the cause and the nature of the phenomenon. One particularly striking manifestation noted by Professor Allen occurred in the early part of June of this year in La Jolla Bay and the ocean contiguous thereto. In this instance an area of red water which in places approached the color of fresh human blood, became so dense that it interfered with fishing activities near the Coronado Islands. It was judged from this that the area must have been at least twenty five or thirty miles long and five to ten miles wide.

At an earlier date the water in La Jolla Bay began to show coloration, some patches becoming particularly conspicious later on. It was determined that this phenomenon was caused by the dinoflagellate Gonyaulax poledra, which was held responsible for wholesale destruction of inshore animal life in the southern California region in 1901.

Another manifestation was noted on May 15 off Seaside, Washington, on the "long beach" a few miles north of the Columbia river. The organism responsible for the coloring was a plankton diatom, which had been previously observed in northern collections made for the Institution but never before in striking abundance. Still another type of diatom was responsible for a coloration off Copalis Beach, north of Grays' Harbor, a day before. This coloration extended for some distance seaward.

HOBART MILLS WRECKER SIGNS C. I. O. CONTRACT

It is reliably reported that, instead of letting the dismantling the Hobart plant and buildings to individual contractors, Jos. Lansburg, in charge of the wrecking project, on Saturday evening signed a contract with the CIO organization of Truckee and agreed to pay the union scale.

Ted LeMair, mining man of Alleghany interested in the Three Kings Mine, was an overnight visitor at the National Hotel Friday.

S. F. EDITOR IS PLEASED WITH NEVADA CITY

Under the title of "Mulling It Over," George W. Lynn, editorial writer on the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, has this bit of Nevada City description and appreciation:

Here is a district of California which, if you have not visited before, you will find picturesque and most interesting.

This is a town of yesterday, today and tomorrow. Nestling deep in hills that are rich in gold and timber, many of its houses and its business streets hark back to the years of early California.

Yet, on a knoll of one of these hills, you will find one of the most modern and advanced types of court house architecture within the state.

Along its deep, winding streets, you will find the beautiful homes and gardens of a new generation, and the shambles of an era that now are but a memory of a lively, exciting past.

You will find modern stores and shops, and you will find the country store and the general store of your childhood.

You will find a hundred drives that bore deep into untouched timber land, you will see saw mills, and mines—and miners.

You will see a land that has kept pace with California progress, but that has not been robbed of its heritage to remain an outpost of civilization.

Another twenty years and much of the picturesque setting that is the Nevada City of another day will be gone.

Each new generation, each crop of boys and girls that is growing into manhood and womanhood, is transforming the setting.

Many, who remember the early West and the early Southwest, will regret this—and others, given more to the spirit of the new than to the worship of the old, will explain that as man lives and changes, so does his setting, so does his home and so does his mode of behavior.

Nevada City is an easy one day or week end trip from San Francisco.

Put the youngsters into the car and take them there so that they, who are growing up in apartment houses and traffic congestion can gain a more intimate glimpse of a pioneer town and a poineer country that is more real, alive and rich in memories than the settings of a historic movie film.

Some day all traces of these early day towns and early day pioneering will be reduced to debris, and that will be a loss to all of California.

A message received from Mrs. J. F. Dolan Friday stated both are getting along nicely. They have taken an apartment near Mr. Dolan's brother, Arthur Dolan, and expect to remain there through this month, and escape the heat.

EPIC Goes Marching On

Upton Sinclair's EPIC plan is not dead—the Communists won't let it die and now are using the words of Sinclair to fight Governor Frank F. Merriamm's re-election.

The latest stunt of the Reds is to quote in their newspaper Sinclair's "How I Got Licked" book with an editor's note that—

"While a man like Merriam can be a threat over California, the old fight of EPIC is not over—it must go on, more united, more determined.

Recognition that the Communists are fighting the governor's re-election is given by John W. Dunlap, ace political writer of the United Press bureau at Sacramento. The United Press is an independent news gathering organization.

Dunlap said in part:

"Political observers who can read between the lines think Governor Frank F. Merriam is convinced he will be opposed next November by Senator Culbert L. Olson.

"It is generally conceded that Olson will be supported by the rank and file of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as well as other liberal groups. His opponents would like it known that even the Communists will back the silvery-haired Democratic chairman of the Democrats in 1934, when Upton Sinclair was the Bourbon standard bearer."

Further proof that the Communists are bent on defeat of Merriam was a printed pamphlet circulated over the name of the "Campaign Committee Communists Party."

One of the points upon which the Reds attacked the governor was the sales tax. They are urging its defeat, which, fiscal authorities point out, would mean closing California schools.—Contributed.

Work Not Wanted

When John Q. Smith, who spent the last three months digging ditches for the WPA, gets a chance to go to work on a ranch, the chances are two to one that he won't take the job!

That is the conclusion of the American Institute of Public Opinion, after querying "the man on relief", several thousands strong. Weighed in the balance, government relief pay triumphed overwhelmingly over the rewards of private employment.

How can relief families be headed back toward the tradi tional American standards of self-dependence? How are we to cope with the damaged morale of our people when the economic opiate of relief finally is withdrawn? The answer, many lealers believe, lies in education. In the words of one: "If we are to escape the creation of a class of relief-bred Americans, broken on the wheel of economic distress and disaster, a heavy responsibility lies with our public schools!

"There are tens of thousands of boys and girls today, born and bred to depression dependence through no fault of their own or of their parents. There are tens of thousands of young men and women just graduating from school, facing heartbreaking disillusionment in the hunt for employment—unless they are equipped with character and courage, as well as diplomas. We have a right to expect the untiring, unselfish devotion of the schools to California's welfare and to the welfare of our youth. And in turn, the schools are entitled to wholehearted public support!"

Those are the words of Lieutenant-Governor George J. Hatfield, candidate for Governor of California, in a speech before a Parent-Teacher group in Los Angeles. And those are the facts that every intelligent citnzen must know are true. Whether John Q. Smith accepts or rejects a job in private employment is important. But more important, is whether his depression-bred sons and daughters grow up to live and think with self-reliance.

If California schools can perform that miracle, they are entitled to the full support and the gratitude of every citizen. —Contributed.

The "Save" In Safety

More than 3,600 men, women and children are alive today, according to a current report of the National Safety Council, because Americans are learning to save lives through safe driving. The report credits the brighter safety picture to three factors—law enforcement, aroused public interest, and finally, the construction of safer highways.

California has been quick to take her place in the crusade against highway homicide. But her program of road improvement, rated among the most important of the life saving devices, is threatened by the curtailment of needed federal allotments. With the prospect of a four-million-dollar reduction in California's authorized share of federal highway funds in the next two years, the state faces the possibility of necessary grade crossing eliminations and plans for safer highway, kept on paper through lack of financing.

Civic leaders and public officials are concerned over the possibility that California may lose the ground so hard won in the safety fight, and their protests are being heard in Washington. Among the first guns trained eastward in the campaign to bring federal funds to California are those of Sheridan Downey, candidate for the United States Senate, who declares:

"California's highway system is national in importance, both as a vital factor in the West's trade network and as an essential part of the Pacific Coast's defense. It is the duty of our representatives in Congress to make clear the significance of California's roads to the entire nation!"

The "save" in safety should mean lives saved—and dollars, too. Actually, the safety of our roads and highways, whether for pleasure seekers, business men, families, school children of for the billions of dollars' worth of business coursing through our arterials every year—in the final analysis means just that—lives saved, and dollars, too!—Contributed.

Government in the Ape Colony

H. M. L. Jr.

A strange story was told me the other day by an explorer just returned from the depths of dark Africa. This man was an explorer-scientist, whose specialty was anthropology. He had made, while in the deep of Kenya jungles an extensive study of the large and highly developed ape colonies there, and had discovered a new race of apes, more manlike than any known before. These apes were intelligent to nearly the degree attained by Australian bushmen. They lived in little colonies in the huge jungle trees, and were crudely ruled by chiefs and councils. They even had a rudimentary kind of language, with a vocabulary about as large as that of human child of two.

My scientist friend, whom I think is a little mad at times, though perfectly sane at all matters pertaining to his science, lived for a year with a few Negro porters, in the midst of one of the larger colonies of the talking apes. Acquainted as he was with the gutterals of primitive modern men, he soon picked up enough of the ape language to understand them. Presently he was even able to converse with them. What an achievement! He was the first scientist able to exchange thoughts with animals. And these animals did have thoughts. Happy and contented with their peaceful, bountiful life, the intelligence of the beasts had found little outlet in their simple life, except in certain mechanical devices for picking fruit, and architectural niceties in tree house and bridge construction.

The scientist found out a great deal about the emotions and attributes of these simple happy apes, and in return he gave to them through the medium of their gutteral language a knowledge of the affairs that go on in the great world past the jungle. The talking apes had been long puzzled by their rare encounters with that devious, curious beast, the man, and they were delighted to hear about all the activities of man that the scientist had time to tell of.

Judson, as we shall call my scientist friend, became particularly friendly with the chief of the tribe among whom he lived, and well acquainted with the council of men-apes who with the chief, ruled the community. Judson was very interested in the method of governing used by the wise old chief and his council, for it appeared that the community of apes might aptly serve as an example of peace and harmony to the human race. Their form of government was simple and effective. In popular assembly of mature male and female apes, a council of outstanding members of the tribe were elected to assist the chief in governing. The chief was elected for life from the members of the council whenever the old chief died.

The governing chief and council were as much interested in learning the governmental methods of the human race as Judson was in learning theirs. The scientist, an expert in teaching animals, knew that the means to most effect was through simplicity. He taught them that the widespread modern methods of government were of two main kinds, fascism and democracy. The chief and council were shrewd enough to see a fundamental similarity between their own form of government and democracy. They commented on it at once. Most of them, however, were intrigued by the curious government under the fascist system.

Judson, translating the fascist ideology into ape lingo with almost incredible ease and simplicity, was able to make them understand clearly the nature of sacrifices endured for the state by fascist peoples, but had difficulty elucidating the benefits. Most of the apes, with their great practical sense, could not grasp the illusory quality of greatness, so enjoyable to suffering fascists. The idea of this perplexing government amused and puzzled the apes. They held a tribal meeting to discuss the subject.

At the meeting ,one shrewd ape member of the ruling council showed an advanced undestanding of this same illusiory quality of greatness. He got up and pictured in glowing words, the future that might be possible under a system he proposed. The ease and quiet of ape life in the jungles he said stagnated their souls. He proposed that they should make a new beginning, concentrate on breeding, expand their territory and dominate other ape tribes, and finally, at the head of a union, conquer the whole of Africa, including even the present human-dominated sections.

That he said would be only the beginning. In words vibrant with emotion, he pictured a glorious march of the apes to a shining goal as rulers of the world. the rightful conquerors of that muddler, the man beast. And who to lead them but him the chosen one to bring them this great opportunity. When he sat down there was not a word of discussion. The old ape chief gravely sentenced the orator to a life of exile, on penalty of, instead of, death if he attempted to return. Immediately, the council rushed him away from the group on his way to exile. "Too, bad;" muttered the chief ape, "he always was a little odd."

SMALL HOMES BUILDING HELP PROSPERITY GAIN

By JOHN CRADDOCK

NEW YORK, 8. — BUSINESS—Construction of small homes is setting the pace for other industries in the general recovery movement which continues unabated, according to reports from many parts of the country. The Federal Housing Administration reported a 100 per cent gain in mortgages selected for appraisal in July over the month last year. Meanwhile, America's mills and factories registered an estimated five per cent increase in production activity for July compared with the previous month. Usually there is a decline during July and August from spring levels. Enthusiastic approval last week of a "great national retail demonstration" by members of the National Retail Dry Goods Association assures a forthcoming event which should be of great interest to consumers. The retail industry, third largest in the nation with annual sales volume of 40 billion dollars and employing 3,500,000 persons, will set aside one week in September for stores all over the nation to unite in dressing up for public inspection.

WASHINGTON—About this time of year merchants and jobbers in every section of the country take inventory of goods on hand, and scan the business skies for possible signs of how much stock they should lay in for fall and winter trade. The U. S. Department of Commerce here, following the same procedure, has just issued its mid-year report on consumers' goods inventories. The report says that stocks on hand have returned to normal. The large quantity of merchandise which accumulated during the latter part of 1936 and early 1937, says the report, has been gradually liquidated. Pointing out that retail sales during the first six months of this year were about 15 per cent under those for the same period of 1937, and about five per cent below 1936, the report concludes that this trend seems to have run its course, and that a continued improvement in sales is is prospect.

WAR SCARE—Hoarding of gold on a widespread scale has cropped out again in Europe where there is general demoralization of sentiment as a result of the new Far Eastern crisis. Should Russia and Japan go to war, it is felt that Hitler might consider it an opportune moment to press his ambitions in the rich agricultural land of Ukraine, now a part of the Soviet Empire. Competent American and English observers, however, are guessing that the threatened Russo-Japanese conflict will not go beyond the present border sniping stage. They point out that stalwart China at the expense of much suffering and hardship among the civilian population has very much weakened Japan during a year of stubborn resistance to conquest. Japan, therefore, is believed to be afraid to take on another adversary at this time in view of her increasingly unstable economic status at home and the prospect of continued determined resistance by the Chinese.

CAMELS PLAYED PART IN HISTORY OF CAIFORNIA

Eighty-two years ago a cargo of camels landed at the small port of Indianola on the Texas coast. The first and last Camel Corps of the United States Army had begun its brief romantic chapter in the history of the old west.

Until the recent discovery by a research worker for the Index of American Design ,a division of the WPA Federal Art Project, of a rusty camel bell in Riverside, the records of that short lived Camel Brigade were preserved in the memory of a few old pioneers(listed in a few newspaper files, and hidden in the voluminous records of congress.

The end of the Mexican war marked the beginning of the great migration to the west. With the opening of the new territory and the discovery of gold, Settlers demanded cheaper modes of transportation than the stage coach and the ships which sailed around the Horn.

A great part of the Santa Fe trail was wasteland whose vegetation of grease wood and sage brush proved unfit food for horses and mules, and in addition water holes of the Mojave desert and Death Valley were brakish and few and far between. Camels had the advantage of being able to eat most any kind of fodder and drink but once every six days.

Some capitalists of New York City formed the "American Camel Company," in 1854 for the purpose of bringing camels from Asia. The limited funds of the organization soon gave out, and not a single beast was imported.

The plan to import camels was first proposed in Congress by the Secretary of War, Jefferson Davis in the Cabinet of President Pierce, at the insistence of Major Henry C. Wayne whose difficulties with mules and horses in the Mexican war resulted in his suggestion to import camels to minimize the problem of frontier transportation in the arid regions of the southwest. In 1855 Congress actually appropriated $30,000 for the undertaking.

Major Wayne was commissioned along with David Dixon Porter, who later became an admiral in the navy, to study and to buy camels abroad. During the Crimean war, these two men purchased camels in Tunis, Malta, Smyrna, Salonica, Balkalava, Constantinople, and Alexander for an average price of $250 a head. In Egypt they obtained an imperial permit to buy camels, for the Egyptian government had forbidden exportation of the beasts.

One of the most unique nautical voyages in American maratime history began on January 30, 1856, when the ship, Supply, took aboard nine camels at Alexander, making a final stop at Smyrna before sailing for the United States with a corps of 44 single humped beasts for the far east.

Gales and storms beset the vessel all the way. The huge animals were tied down in keeling position during most the trip. The Arabs, brought along to care for them, proved worth less, and the burden fell upon the American crew. Due, to the meticulous watch over the camels by Lieutenant Porter, only one camel died enroute, and when the Supply docked at Indianola three months later, the herd had an addition of two calves.

Intensive study and care of the camels began at Campe Verde near San Antonio. Another cargo of 44 camels arrived shortly afterward. A year later under the command of Edward Fitzgerald Beale the first camel expedition on the North American continent started on its perilous journey to the Pacific Coast.

Eighty-two years later, all that was left of this memorable expedition was a bell, embossed with the seal of the U. S. Army, removed from its dark and dusty shelf to sound once more in the imagination of men—to sound as it had first sounded around the shaggy neck of a lumbering beast from Asia which was plodding across the American desert, narrowing the baundaries of an empire.

Leaving San Antonio June 25, 1857, a single file of men turned the heads of 28 camels toward the west where men for the next 50 years were to bury their despair and in turn were to sow hope in a fertile and responsive land.

Five months later, after 1200 miles of heat and sand, not unlike the triumphant return of a Roman emperor, although not clothed in the purple toga of royalty, but saturated with sweat and crusted with the dust of a new and mighty country, Edward Fitzgerald Beale entered Los Angeles to become the first man in American history to transverse the foreboding land of a 'true ship of the desert.'

At the conclusion of his trip, Beale said in praise of the camels, "They are the noblest beasts alive."

Then the Civil War struck like a saber, dividing states and sentiments. The cry of "gold," echoed from ocean to ocean. The iron horse pushed its rails to the very shores of the Pacific. Dollars, by the millions, rolled westward to develop the newly acquired territory. In the shuffle of war and expansion, the camels were forgotten.

In 1863 Secretary of War Stanton ordered them disposed at public auction, and the first Camel Corps of the United States army was disbanded to the raucous cry of an auctioneer. And the few intrepid men who had lived and slept with these noble beasts as they trod the arid regions of America, stood quietly by and saw their brigade come to an inglorious end.

At Benecia, California, in 1864, the entire herd was sold to Samuel McLenaghn who resold most of them several days later. However, McLenaghn took ten of the camels and planned a freight train from Sacramento to the mining country of Nevada. Hoping to raise money for his venture, McLenaghn held a camel race at Sacramento, charging 50c admission. Although a thousand persons paid to see the event, after the expenses of the race were paid, promoter Sam McLenaghn only realized $180.

McLenaghn never established his freight train but sold the camels in Nevada where the brutes ended their days carrying salt from the central part of the state to Austin.

Part of the herd ended their days in circuses and zoos while the others went to Edward Fitzgerald Beale, the same man who had led the first camel expedition in America. During his declining days, nothing gave the old general more pleasure than to drive his sulky drawn by a tandem of camels from his El Tejon ranch near Bakefsfield to Los Angeles, talking to them in Syrian.

A number of these camels have been reported as wild herds in Arizona and Death Valley, but there are no authentic records to substantiate the report.

And now, all that is left of the only U. S. Camel Corps of the army is an iron camel bell, aging among the historical oddities of our once glamorous and proud fontier. The camels are gone, the intrepid men who rode them across the great American desert are gone, and the camel bell is silenced forever in the undisturbed sumber of the cemetery of progress.

WHY NOT EMPLOY A TRAINED CORONER?

A presumption, apart from evidence, may be often determined in certain cases by the fact that a very large number of deaths is caused by accident during occupation or while bathing or boating, or of set purpose, as in suicide. It must not be forgotten that a body may be thrown into the water to cloak the commission of crime in another form. Presumption is of no value whatever when an examination of the body will indicate proof. The question often arises: Was the person dead or alive before the body was submerged in the water? Only a Doctor who is trained and qualified can determine this question.

There are in addition certain medico-legal forms of death from causes which usually form the subject of criminal investigation. Among these are the following: Death by drowning, by suffocation, by hanging, strangulation, and throttling, by lightning and electricity, by burning and scalding, by criminal neglect and starvation, by cold and exposure, by heat apoplexy, and by mortal wounds. Who is better qualified to determine these causes—a Doctor who is Coroner or a layman?

Place the Coroner's Office in the hands of a Professional man where it rightfully belongs. Your support will be appreciated.

WELL BELOVED CAMPTONVILLE RESIDENT DEAD

CAMPTONVILLE, Aug. 8.—Edward J. Price, pioneer and beloved citizen of this community passed away Thursday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Hanson on Main street, after a brief illness. His passing came as a shock to many of his friends because of the short duration of his illness.

He was born here 76 years ago, spent his childhood days in this community, being a member of one of the pioneer families of this section. He attended the local schools and as a boy was active in the events of the community. As a young man he worked some little time at Brandy City, later moving to San Francisco where he held a responsible position with a large stationery firm for several years. He returned here during recent years to spend the rest of his life at his old home.

Ed or Eddie Price, as he was called, was one of the best liked men in the community, was always good natured, with a smile and a kind word and always ready and willing to put forth a helping hand to a needy neighbor or a worthy cause. He owned a nice home in the center of town and took pride in keeping it up.

Deceased is survived by one son Eslie Price, of San Francisco, two brothers, David Price and Samuel F. Price, both of this place, and two sisters. Mrs. Elizabeth Fraser of Campbell and Mrs. Jennie Kendall of San Francisco.

Funera services were held yesterday at one-thirty o'clock in the local Masonic Hall interment in the local I. O. O. F. cemetery.

GOVERNOR WILL OPPOSE MINING SEVERANCE TAX

Governor Merriam's statement of Saturday that there would be no new taxes in the next legislature and that he would continue to oppose a severance tax is reassuring to the entire mining industry, according to Philip R. Bradley, well known mining man and head of the Alaska-Juneau.

"Governor Merriam has always opposed a severance tax," said Bradley. "His pledge that he will continue his opposition to this ill-considered proposal, fraught with such danger to the industry, will be reassuring to mining men everywhere and will enrourage new capital to invest in mines. That, in turn, means more men at work and increased prosperity for the state.

"A severance tax, collected on products of the soil after they have been recovered from the ground, would be ruinous to mining and injurious to agriculture," Bradley continued. "The farmer has a chance to recover the tax by increasing the price of his product to the consumer, provided, always that the price remains within the range that the consumer can afford to pay. The mining man, on the other hand, has only one cutomer, Uncle Sam, and the price is fixed by the government so that the tax would have to come out of his pocket.

"While the present price of gold has increased the value of gold production by seventy five per cent," he said, "it should be understood that this does not represent a 75 percent profit to mining. It has prolonged the life of non-marginal properties which can now work on low grade ore. Many marginal properties, which formerly remained closed, are now able to work on low grade ores and show a small profit where such operation was impossible undeh the old conditions. A severance tax would wipe out this narrow margin and force a shut down of hundreds of properties which now give work to thousands of miners."

HATFIELD RAPS HIGH WPA WAGES SCALE IN CALIF.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8. — "If California is to escape becoming 'the poorhouse of the nation,' we must insist that the Federal government take immediate action to adopt uniform relief payments and uniform WPA wage scales throughout the country."

That positive declaration was made today by Lieutenant Governor George J. Hatfield in an address in San Diego, strongly commending the work of the California Citizens' Association in attempting to halt the rush of penniless migrants now invading the state.

"California tax payers are being penalized for their own generosity," said the Republican candidate for governor. "So long as the WPA wage scale in California is twice as high as that paid in many other states, the influx of destitute people from the dust bowl and other areas is bound to continue. All civic organizations in California should join in demanding that the federal government take action to stop the vicious practice which now obtains in many middle western states of 'starving out' unfortunate families and in forcing them to seek support from California and other states.

"I believe that uniform relief payments throughout the nation would be a tremendous factor in halting the rush of migrants to California.

"There is no more critical problem confronting the people of California and if I am elected governor I shall do my utmost to see that California wage standards are upheld and that our state is protected from the invasion of destitute and jobless which is now in progress."

BARBECUE AND DANCE PROVED GRAND SUCCESS

The first annual barbecue and dance of the state employees of the local sections has passed into history and was a grand success from any viewpoint. There was a good attendance, 2400 "plates" being served during the two meals furnished, 1100 on Saturday night and 1300 Sunday afternoon. The music was excellent at both the Saturday and Sunday dances. The weather was ideal and everyone enjoyed the two-day party.

The dance Saturday was continued beyond the 4 o'clock time set and dancers were reluctant to go when it finally shut down, a good number of the 250 couples who entered remaining until 5 a. m.

The barbecue for Sunday had to go in the pit at 7 a. m. so there was not much rest for Sheriff Tobiassen and his helpers. The state employees sure have a deep feeling of gratitude for Carl devoting the time he did in preparing and cooking the meat especially at this, a very busy time during his campaign and his brother's very serious injury and hospitalization at Sacramento.

He was on the job. Many were the comments on the deliciousness of the meat—and there was plenty to go around.

To William C. Cunningham went the honors of the celebration, he being the generous donor of the 1000 pounds of beef in celebration of his twenty years' employment with the state division of highways and association with state employees and many friends of the community. Bill was presented with a wrist watch from the state employees by Fred Garrison, who expressed the sentiments of his associates in hoping it would keep Bill on the job for many more years to come.

Sunday afternoon was given over to outdoor entertainment including horse racing, wood sawing and chopping contests, races and fun. This was followed by an amateur contest in Twamley Hall broadcast by U. S. Lager Beer and Tick's Cafe. The local talent presented was exceptionally good and well received by every one. First prize went to Dorothy Rexall, singing; second honors were tied with singing by Mildred and Billy Tobiassen and tap dancing by Betty Mathias; third prize to Dolores Hendricks for singing.

MOLEY SUPPORTS WARREN IN ATTY. GENERAL RACE

Raymond Moley, nationally known publicist and former Assistant United States Secretary of State under President Roosevelt, yesterday issued a statement giving emphatic endorsement of the candidacy of Earl Warren for Attorney General of California.

In a letter from New York, Moley accredits Earl Warren with conducting the "most competent district attorney's office in the country." His letter follows:

"Dear Earl:

I was delighted to hear that you were making the run for Attorney General. Considering the legal status of that position in California, it will give you an immense opportunity to influence the administration of justice throughout the state. I have already said on various occasions that a long study of the district attorney's offices throughout the country in connection with the various books and reports that I have made on the subject, has convinced me that you have been conducting the most competent district attorney's office in the country.

"Your grasp of the subject was well illustrated in 1933, when I was in Washington in office, and when at the direction of the President I was making some contributions to the development of more efficient methods of criminal law and administration. At that time your suggestions were of inestimable value, and many of them have since been incorporated in the practices of the Federal law enforcement machinery. I hope the people of California will appreciate the signal opportunity that they have to bring your fine judgment, courage and broad knowledge of the law into this wider service.

Very sincerely yours,
RAYMOND MOLEY."

SIERRA SHERIFF SEEKS WOUNDED MAN IN WILDS

DOWNIEVILLE, Aug. 8.—Sheriff W. D. Johnson and posse left today for a point in the wilds ten miles north of here to rescue a San Franciscan who yesterday accidentally was shot in the abdomen.

As the sheriff's posse left for the arduous trip by trail to the scene of the accident, the officer learned only that the wounded man was one of two San Francisco residents who left here yesterday to visit a mine in an almost inaccesible part of the county.

The sheriff was advised that the men stopped at a spring. One of them, carrying his revolver in a shoulder holster, stooped to drink. The gun fell from the holster and was discharged.

The possemen expected to arrive in Downieville upon their return late today.
